If you've got something to say about the city's light rail project, next Thursday is your chance.

Mayor Jim Watson called a special council meeting to hear from the public at city hall on July 14 at 10 a.m.

Tomorrow, Watson is scheduled to release new LRT cost estimates and deliver a special address about the project. David Jeanes, president of Transport Action Canada, is registered to speak and he says he's looking forward to hearing the new estimates.

"We've been concerned about the costs and the affordability of the project and also the rather long

Watson has said in the past there is a possibility city councillors will vote down the project if they find it unaffordable.

Standing up for missing women

► Activists march to put an end to violence against native women

JOE LOFARO
@METRONEWS.CA

About 1,000 women marched downtown yesterday to raise awareness of the high rates of missing and murdered native women in Canada.

"Right now there are over 582 aboriginal women and girls missing or murdered, yet many Canadians are unaware," said Claudette Dumont-Smith, executive director of the Native Women's Association of Canada.

The march started at the Ottawa Convention Centre and continued down Wellington Street to Parliament Hill. Many of the marchers are in town for the 2011 Women's World Conference, which takes place this week at the Ottawa Convention Centre and the University of Ottawa.

Not forgotten

More than 582 aboriginal women and girls are missing in Canada, NWAC says. These are a few of them:

- Maisy Odjick has been missing since Sept. 6, 2008, from Maniwaki, Que. She was 16 at the time of her disappearance.
- Shannon Alexander has also not been seen since Sept. 6, 2008, in Maniwaki, Que. She was 17 at the time she went missing.
- Pamela Holopainen was last seen in Timmins, Ont., on Dec. 14, 2003. She was 22.
- Bea Kwaronihawi Barnes has been missing since Jan. 5, 2010, from the Chateauguay area of Quebec. She was 17.
- Claudette Osborne went missing on July 24, 2008, from Winnipeg. She was 22 when last seen.

► Women and male supporters march to Parliament Hill yesterday to raise awareness of missing and murdered native women in Canada. The Native Women's Association of Canada says poverty and lack of educational opportunities have a direct correlation to the high rates of violence against aboriginal women.

Pool worker overcome by fumes

A Boys and Girls Club employee was recovering in hospital yesterday after he was exposed to chlorine gas.

The employee accidentally mixed muriatic acid and chlorine, which created a noxious gas that filled the basement and lobby of the club and quickly injured his respiratory system, paramedics said.

"He was able to call 911 on his own," said Daniel Brunette, acting director at the club on Dumaurier Avenue in Ottawa's west end.

The employee was certified as a Level 1 and 2 pool operator a couple of weeks ago by the Canada Lifesaving Society, Brunette said.

Ottawa Fire haz-mat crews neutralized the chemicals and ventilated the area, and the pool opened as usual in the afternoon. ■ JESSICA SMITH

Paying tribute to a fallen officer

► Const. Garrett Styles remembered as courageous, compassionate
► Premier, York police chief among those who spoke at funeral service

The wife of fallen police officer Const. Garrett Styles told his funeral service yesterday she's "in pieces" after losing her first and only love.

Melissa Styles remained remarkably composed as she read a letter to her late husband during the service for the York Region officer, who died last week after being dragged and pinned under a minivan he had pulled over.

"We always told each other 'I love you to bits and pieces,' and that has never been more true," she said. "Right now I am in pieces, but I will put myself back together for our children because I know that was what you would want me to do."

After finishing the letter, which took her about two minutes to read, Melissa Styles received a standing ovation from the mourners who packed the

Cdn. troops hand battlefield to U.S. forces

Canada's desert war effectively came to an end yesterday when soldiers of the Royal 22e Regiment formally handed over their battlefield to American units and began to take stock of years of bloody combat.

The country's legal command responsibility for the western Kandahar district of Panjwaii will continue for several days, but Brig.-Gen. Dean Milner's headquarters will be directing U.S. combat units.

Almost all Canadian troops are now out of the killing fields of Kandahar, save for a handful of soldiers who will serve for perhaps a few more weeks, attached to American platoons.

Canada's role in Afghanistan has cost the lives of 157 soldiers, one diplomat and one journalist.

For more than five years, Canada has made war in the wasted farmland and dust-choked villages of this brutal, backward country. Yet rarely did those in authority use the W word to describe what happened here.

Politicians, diplomats and bureaucrats routinely shied away from describing it in comfortless terms, especially in the beginning when former defence minister Gordon O'Connor was chided for refusing to say the word "war."

"The lawyers will get all over it and say you can't call it war, but that it's an armed conflict," Gen. Walt Natynczyk, the chief of defence staff, said in a recent interview with The Canadian Press. "For the young soldiers, sailors airmen and airwomen, it feels like war because someone is shooting at them."

Parliament ordered an end to the Canadian combat mission in southern Afghanistan back in 2008, setting July 2011 as the deadline. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bushman stalks couple before attacking them

► Papua New Guinean shot tourist by arrow, assaulted his girlfriend

A young couple who took a dip in a river in a remote part of Papua New Guinea are recovering from a harrowing attack by a tribesman who shot the man with arrows twice before attempting to sexually assault the woman.

Police in Papua New Guinea said the attacker is being sought, and a hospital official said the suspect previously has been imoned for rape. The couple have declined requests to speak to the media, but interviews by The Associated Press this week with the local doctor who first treated the pair, along with other accounts from Papua New Guinea, are shedding new light on the rare attack near Nomad in the isolated North Fly District.

Dr. Charlie Turharus said the tribesman had been covertly tracking the pair for perhaps an hour or two before the June 19 attack. He fired an arrow at Matt Scheurich as the 28-year-old

New Zealander relaxed on a river bank while his girlfriend, a French doctoral student studying tribal life, swam in the river.

The attacker also threw rocks at Scheurich's head, the doctor said. The man then attempted to sexually assault the French woman, but she managed to run to a nearby village, where she activated a personal locator beacon. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An Important Notice for Adult Ontarians Living with Diabetes

Living with diabetes is not easy, but managing it day-to-day really means taking good care of yourself.

There are three key tests that people living with diabetes should receive on a regular basis. They are:

- the HbA1C blood glucose control test, which patients should receive at least every six months
- the LDL-C cholesterol test, which patients should receive every year
- a retinal eye exam, which patients should receive every two years

The Diabetes Testing Report was created to help inform your primary care provider (physician or nurse practitioner in a Nurse Practitioner-Led Clinic) of when you last had each of these three tests.

People living with diabetes who are tested regularly are better able to manage their diabetes and avoid complications. The Diabetes Testing Report will help you and your primary care provider better manage your diabetes care by reminding him or her if you are overdue for an HbA1C test, LDL-C test or retinal eye exam, and it will encourage you and your primary care provider to talk about your diabetes care.

Protecting Your Privacy

In order to create the Diabetes Testing Report, your primary care provider may share personal health information, including your name, OHIP number, and date of birth, with the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care (MOHLTC). He or she will also confirm whether you have diabetes. In response, the MOHLTC will share the most recent dates of each of the three tests with your provider. Your privacy is important, and you are not required to have your information included in this report.

Deciding Not to Share Your Information

You may decide that you do not want your primary care provider to disclose your information to the MOHLTC, and that you do not wish to be included in your provider's Diabetes Testing Reports. If you choose to withhold or withdraw your consent, this will in no way affect your relationship with your health care provider and he or she will continue to provide care to you.

If you wish to withhold or withdraw your consent to having your information disclosed by your primary care provider and in any Diabetes Testing Reports that MOHLTC sends to your primary care provider, call 1-800-291-1405 (TTY: 1-800-387-5559). If you have previously withheld or withdrawn your consent to have your information included on the Diabetes Testing Report, you do not need to withhold or withdraw your consent again. If you wish to reinstate your consent, you can do so by calling the number above.

In Ontario, the Personal Health Information Protection Act, 2004 (PHIPA) is the legislation that governs the collection, use, retention, and disclosure of personal health information by health information custodians, including MOHLTC and primary care providers. For more information about the collection, use, and disclosure of your personal health information for the purposes of the Diabetes Testing Report, call the numbers listed above. For more information about diabetes, visit ontario.ca/diabetes.

LETTING IT ALL HANG OUT IN COURT

JUST SAYIN' ...

PAUL SULLIVAN

METRO

If you go out in the woods today, you could be in for a big surprise. You could see some bares.

That has already occurred in Ontario's cottage country, where a Bracebridge man is in court arguing it's OK to go for a walk in the park or turn up at the A&W drive-thru without any clothes on.

Brian Coldin, whose very name induces shrinkage, is a self-declared Christian naturist. He believes the section of the Criminal Code governing nudity violates the constitution. And he has some high-priced legal talent on his side, including the fully and handsomely attired Clayton Ruby.

My favourite moment in the trial to date came when the fast-food clerk who took Coldin's order was driven to tears as she testified she could see his genitals during the incident. It's simply something they don't tell you at

Burger University. ("Be sure to ask if he wants fries with that.")

This is not the first time Naked Man has been in trouble with the law — he says he has been picked up by the (long-suffering) police more than 200 times. And he still doesn't have the sense to cover himself.

He thinks the police are trying to prevent him from practising his Christian naturist beliefs. I thought Christ was a scientist, not a nudist. I must be confused.

While section 174 of the Criminal Code could probably use an overhaul — theoretically, if you get caught coming out of the shower in your own home after forgetting to pull the curtains, you could get busted — imagine if Coldin wins and every Tom, er, Dick and Harry who wants to let it all hang out can and does.

It's not a pretty picture. You can bet that most people compelled to make a spectacle of themselves will be near-sighted. Really good-looking people are rarely inclined to take it all off at the A&W. Probably because it might cause nearby Christian naturists to join in the fun.

Of course, Naked Man enjoys the support of the president of the Federation of Canadian Naturists, who points out that casual nudity should not be in the same league as "theft, robbery, assault and murder." Well, maybe not murder.

But they're asking the wrong people. Whose rights are really in peril here? People who want to ride the bus naked? Or the rest of us who will be forced to bare witness to their folly?

Stand up and be counted. And just make sure your pants stand up along with you.

OTTAWA. A new study suggests more than one-quarter of the 7.5 million eligible voters who did not cast a ballot in the May 2 federal election said they did not do so because they were not interested in voting.

Statistics Canada found another 23 per cent of the non-voters it surveyed said they were too busy to vote.

The most common response for not having voted, that people were "not interested in voting" (28 per cent), also includes feeling their vote would not have made a difference in the election results.

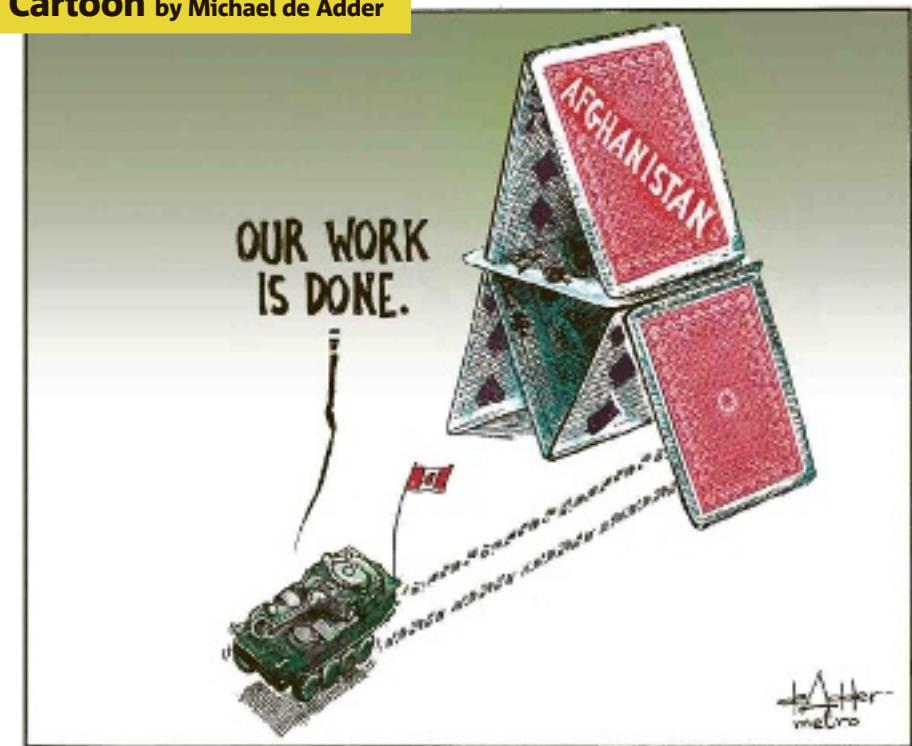

The 23 per cent who said they were "too busy," includes having family obligations or having a schedule conflict at work or school.

Another 10 per cent told Statistics Canada they were out of town or away, while eight per cent reported they did not like the candidates or campaign issues.

Roughly four per cent said they forgot to vote, while a little more than one per cent said they did not vote because of religious beliefs.

Free Tickle Me Elmo to those who visit spa

At Cosquillarte spa in Madrid, Spain, customers strip, head to the treatment room and get ready to relax. That's when the staff take out the feathers — and tickle.

Cosquillarte, which translates both as Tickle Yourself and Tickle Art, is a tickle spa. No massages, no facials, no hot rocks — just tickles.

And while those traumatized by cruel uncles or playground pokes may not be enamoured with the idea, regulars insist a half-hour tickle session is actually relaxing.

Isabel Aires, the PR expert behind the spa, has been addicted to tickles since childhood.

And it seems there are a number of tickle addicts out there ready to give the service a try.

Customers aren't subjected to harsh pokes or grabs to their armpits and rib cages. Instead, the therapy consists of light strokes of the hand, feathers and a hat made up of light, protruding fibres that lightly brush against the skin.

A 15-minute tickle session costs $21; whereas 60 minutes will set you back $63.

Toyota to receive government cash

► Money will be used to upgrade aging Ontario plants

Two Toyota plants in Ontario will receive a $545-million injection from the automaker and the federal and provincial governments to give the aging facilities an environmentally friendly makeover.

Ontario will provide a $70.8-million grant and the federal government will match that amount in the form of a repayable loan to Toyota Motor Manufacturing Canada Inc. for plant upgrades in Cambridge and Woodstock.

"(This money) is very important because it allows us to give these initiatives priority and helps to secure our production footprint in Canada," said Ray Tanguay, chairman of Toyota Motor Manufacturing Canada.

The round of upgrades will support production of cleaner, more fuel-efficient vehicles at Toyota's Ontario plants. The automaker will use part of the money to upgrade the paint shop at its Cambridge North plant. The company plans to convert its base-coat paints from a solvent-based system to a water-based system to reduce emissions.

It will also make other plant upgrades, including new machinery and equipment, and employee training. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bombardier's cuts back U.K. workforce

The future of Bombardier Transportation's railway operations in Britain appears uncertain as the manufacturing giant reviews its U.K. activities as contracts wind down.

The railway division of the Montreal-based train and plane maker said it is conducting a "complete review" over the next month.

"Everything is open," spokesman Marc Laforge said in an interview when asked about the future of the U.K.'s only remaining railway plant in Derby.

"We are considering any type of scenarios that may occur on the line."

Bombardier took the first step Tuesday by announcing plans to cut nearly half of the workforce at the plant in central England after it lost a contract to German rival Siemens. A 90-day consultation process has begun before it lays off about 446 permanent staff and 983 temporary hires.

Four out of five existing contracts in Derby end in September. The remaining contract is to supply 1,300 metro cars for London Underground's sub-surface lines by 2014.

Derby has been making trains since the 1840s and was among the world's largest rail manufacturing sites. Bombardier purchased the facility from Daimler Chrysler in 2001.

It will employ some 1,600 workers following the layoffs.

Charlie Sheen

There should be no shortage of material. Comedy Central said yesterday that Charlie Sheen has agreed to be the subject of its next celebrity roast. It will be taped in Los Angeles and air on Sept. 19. That also happens to be the same night that Ashton Kutcher debuts as Sheen's replacement in the CBS comedy Two and a Half Men. Sheen was thrown off the show after his hard partying forced a production shutdown.

METRO WORLD NEWS IN LOS ANGELES

When he's not keeping night-owls entertained hosting the Late Late Show, Craig Ferguson has been sneaking into recording studios to lend his vocal talents to several animated projects, including last year's surprise hit How to Train Your Dragon and next summer's Pixar release, Brave.

This year, Ferguson takes on a classic as Owl in Disney's new version of Winnie the Pooh.

The hard-working Scotsman spoke with Metro about growing up on Pooh, finding Owl's voice and the future of his TV gig.

Were you already a fan of Winnie the Pooh?

Oh yeah, of course. I knew the stuff. The books were read to me when I was a very little kid, and I watched the Disney movies and TV shows, I remember, as a child. So yeah, I'm very familiar with it. And I've got now two kids myself, so the figure of Pooh Bear is a familiar one at my house. My favourite as a kid was Tigger — not at all Owl, who I suppose radiated a kind of intellectual figure, but the character of Tigger, who was kind of crazy and unrestrained. I loved Tigger when I was a kid.

You're not your usual Scottish self as Owl.

I think that we all felt that an English and a sort of kind of stuffy, pompous, kind of upper class sound was the most appropriate.

You've done a great deal of voice work for animation. What about it appeals to you so much?

Animation is very attractive if you're in my line of work because, you know, you're not limited by your own physical appearance, clearly. You're the voice of a character and kind of the personality to a degree, but you're not the character's appearance. So you don't have to worry about your physical limitations, right down to the extent of when you go to work that day you don't have to shave.

Where do you see the Late Late Show going?

I don't know. I think that's a fair question, and it's something I've been asking myself recently.

I mean, I've been doing it since January 2005, so I guess it will be coming up on seven years.

I don't know how much I can do with it or where I'm going to take it.

I'll do it for a little while longer, but I really don't know how it's going to play out.

I like keeping it as loose as possible. I think that's what makes our show different — it's a very, very informal, intimate kind of non-structure or deconstructed type of a show.

So I'd like to make sure that we're doing that and keeping it friendly and available to the people who enjoy it — and continue to enjoy it myself.

Diving into the blue

► Orlando's Discovery Cove offers fun for the whole family ► Interact with dolphins and snorkel among tropical fish ► Check out the newest addition to the park — the Grand Reef

 AURELIE RESCH
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

"Mommy! Look! A sting ray!" Normally, I would jump on my feet and promptly extract my child from the water, but here at the Grand Reef I encouraged him to dive in and chase the gracious one-meter-wide fish.

Spending a day at Discovery Cove in Orlando is plunging into a whole new world.

Diving into the blue. A cure to urbanitis. Here, you stroll in lush landscapes on a 30-acre tropical oasis and encounter exotic sealife.

After swimming and interacting with a bottlenose dolphin named Tyler in one of the several lagoons on the property, my children and I went to a new addition to the park, opened on June 11, called the Grand Reef.

My two-year-old daughter laughed as she paddled in the shallow water among scholar fish while my two boys kept busy chasing big rays among the artificial and colourful reefs.

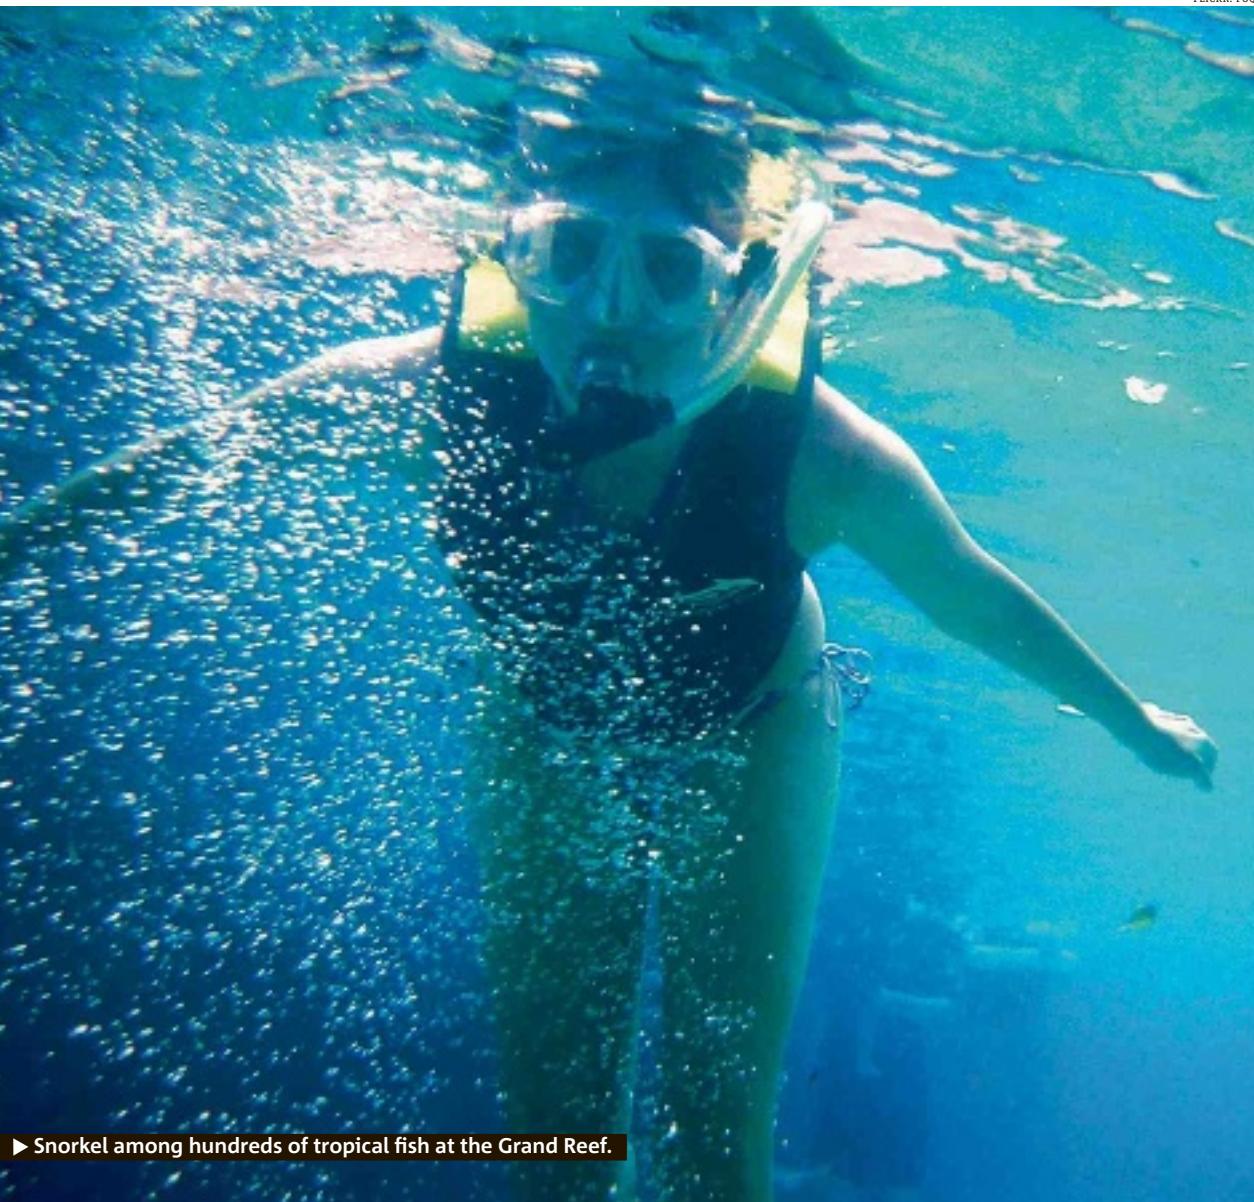

Joining the excitement,

What to do

► Besides the sealife, you can also relax and sunbathe on one of several white-sand beaches, build sandcastles with your little ones or hand-feed an extraordinary variety of exotic birds in the aviary.

► Discovery Cove also offers the opportunity to be a dolphin trainer for a day or have a dolphin play a special role in your marriage proposal or on your birthday. Professional photographers are available to make your memories of the day last forever.

► Let yourself be tempted by a souvenir from one of the Discovery Cove giftshops. From a unique piece of jewelry or artwork featuring marine themes to stuffed animals, clothing and framed photos, bring your memories home.

FLICKR: WENDY PIERSALL

► Interact with dolphins at Discovery Cove.

What's included

Your full day at Discovery Cove includes meals, snacks and beverages, as well as towels, wetsuits and swim gear, plus a pass for unlimited admission to SeaWorld or Aquatica in Orlando or Busch Gardens in Tampa to be used surrounding a Discovery Cove visit (extra for the dolphin's encounter and Seaventure).

► For more information, visit discoverycove.com.

I went snorkelling in deeper water among hundreds of tropical fish and ventured close to a glass wall behind which reef sharks and lionfish stared unblinkingly at me.

While sharing with my children the exhilaration of flirting with sealife, I observed visitors embarking on another journey: The Seaventure.

Geared up with diving helmets and special wetsuits, they would venture on the seafloor of the Grand Reef for an up-close encounter with the ocean's flora and fauna.

Before my jolly troop surrendered to fatigue, I took them down the gentle current of a lazy river that travels through the park. We ended up our day unwinding while observing exotic birds flying gracefuly above our heads.

Beach etiquette

As people head to the pool or beach this summer, they might want to spare a thought for matters of etiquette. Blasting loud music is a no-no. It emerged as the most annoying etiquette violation in a recent TripAdvisor survey. Littering and public intoxication were also deplored at the beach, while chair hogging and smoking were given the thumbs-down at the pool.

WAYS TO AVOID THE CROWDSADIE
SAMPSON
'ALTERNATIVE' TOUR OPERATORRESERVE YOUR PLACE OR ASK THE LOCALS

- For tourist hotspots, reserving your spot online or by phone before your visit can be the best option. If there's no way of doing that, ask a local about the best time to go. This can be your hotel reservation desk or even a taxi driver. Hotels want to provide good service and taxi drivers know the city well. Don't be afraid to ask.

IF YOU MUST, QUEUE UP –
BUT ONLY IF IT'S WORTHWHILE!

- If you still find yourself waiting, remain calm. I once found myself queuing for two hours to see the Alhambra in Spain. It is something I will never see again and was mildly impressive, so worth the wait. It all comes down to your sense of whether it's worth it. I hear of people queuing for hours for the big clubs in Berlin. I think it's absurd to waste half your night just to say you've been there.

GO OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

- Bored of tourist spots? Try unorthodox routes to hidden fun. I always go to local bars. Tip the barman on the first drink and they are usually happy to talk about their city. If that sounds crazy, here's a less daring option. Talk with guys selling tickets for boat tours or tour buses. They usually have a lot of spare time... I loved it when I worked as a ticket seller and people would ask me questions. The last option is simply losing yourself in the city. This can be a wonderful adventure, but be careful: there are some places where this might not be a good idea, so get an idea of what the area is like before you go off searching for local treasures.

HOW DANIELLE STEEL
SURVIVES THE SUMMER

► What's in this novelist's suitcase: 'A Bible and a pair of fun, sexy shoes!' ► Steel tells Metro what's on her travel list of do's and don'ts

ELISABETH
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

For years, a Danielle Steel novel, along with shades and sun-tan lotion, has been an essential item in the beach bag of any seasoned sunbather. But what does the world-famous bestselling author herself read on holiday? Metro caught up with Steel to find out her holiday habits, pet peeves and worst memories.

Oddest attractions you've seen while on vacation?

I must have very dull vacations. I can't think of any awful people I've dealt with on holiday, any terrible food I've eaten, or odd attractions I've seen. I spend most of my vacations with my children; we love being together and have a great time. Maybe we're the 'odd attraction' with a family with nine children! And probably the worst food I've eaten, anywhere, is my own, when I cook. One of my sons teased me and said it has taken him years to eat my food without crying.

And the worst?

Possibly one of our worst vacations was a driving trip to Death Valley, when all nine of my children were very young. The drive was long, the heat deadly, we got switched from the hotel to the campground with no warning, and several of my kids broke out in chicken pox on the way there. Now there was a memorable vacation! We all laugh about it now.

Who were the worst people you dealt with on vacation?

I can't think of anyone. Maybe airline people when your flight is five hours late, and they lie to you about it, and you sit there waiting for what seems like an eternity, and then finally, after you sit around all day, waiting, they cancel the flight!

Which five things do you absolutely need while you're holidaying? My children (what would I do without them?), my briefcase (I panic without it — what if I get an idea and need pen and paper to quickly write it down?), my computer so I can stay in touch with the outside world, the Bible, and a great pair of fun, sexy shoes.

Which books/music you read/listen to on holiday? I read novels that are enjoyable and entertaining; I don't read serious non-fiction books on holiday. I don't like books that make me sad! I listen to whatever music my children play (very loudly).

Summer exclusive
PACKING MY BAG

REESE
TELLS METRO HOW TO PACK

What's the essential way of packing your carry-on bags?

I'm fascinated with this topic: what do you pack? I think you have to find one central colour and base your entire wardrobe around a colour. Dresses, jeans — but usually black, because you're always going to have a pair of black boots that goes with everything, or a pair of black flats. But you can't mix in the browns and the grays, because then you'll overpack. It's hard. That's why you have to have a simple style.

I think everybody's trying to just do carry-on because of all these extra charges for bags, and it's a pain to have to wait around for your suitcase. For this, just roll up your clothes. My other tip is pack everything in zipper storage bags, and then you push all the air out of them and make them compress. You can get so much more with your bag. NED EHRBAR

How to build a super sand castle

Once you've amassed enough sand for your dream castle, start at the top and begin carving out the details. "Small details are often more astonishing than massive structures," Gonzales said. "Apply finishes such as tile roofs or a pebble design to the facade."

"Be sure to wear plenty of sunscreen and drink lots of water as building a big sand castle is very labour-intensive!"

A summer spin on your fave pick-me-up

► The weather may be heating but you still want to enjoy a cup of coffee ► These easy-to-make recipes cool down (and kick up) that hot must-have beverage

It wasn't too long ago that a cup of cold coffee wasn't worth beans. But these days, iced coffee is one hot brew.

A few fun facts: Nearly 60 per cent of iced coffee is consumed at breakfast, 20 per cent is treated as a snack, 13 per cent of sales are for lunch and four per cent for dinner. Consumption is heaviest in the Northeast and the frosty java is more popular with women than men.

Check out these easy-to-make recipes.

Coffee Bananas Foster Smoothie

Preparation:

1 In a blender, combine all ingredients. Blend until smooth and frothy.

Parlour Coffee Float

Preparation:

1 In a blender, combine coffee, chocolate syrup, half-and-half and half of the ice cream. Blend until smooth and frothy. Pour into 2 tall glasses and top with a scoop of the remaining ice cream. Top with whipped cream and a cherry, if desired.

Shopping list:

Coffee Bananas Foster Smoothie

- 375 ml (1 1/2 cups) strong brewed coffee, chilled
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) cinnamon
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) dark brown sugar
- 2 small ripe bananas
- 175 ml (3/4 cup) vanilla yogurt
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) fat-free

half-and-half

- 250 ml (1 cup) ice cubes
- 375 ml (1 1/2 cups) strong brewed coffee, chilled
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) chocolate syrup
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) half-and-half
- 250 ml (1 cup) chocolate or coffee ice cream
- Whipped cream, to serve
- Maraschino cherries

Nightcap Ice Coffee

Preparation:

1 Spiced sugar: In bowl, mix together turbinado sugar, nutmeg and cardamom. Place on plate. Moisten rim of large tumbler then invert glass onto plate so that sugar sticks to rim. Fill glass with ice.

2 In a cocktail shaker filled with ice, combine Godiva, co-gnac, Kahlua, espresso and sweetened condensed milk. Shake for 1 minute.

Ingredients:

- 30 ml (1 oz) Navan vanilla cognac
- 30 ml (1 oz) Kahlua Espresso
- 60 ml (2 oz) espresso, chilled
- 30 ml (1 oz) sweetened condensed milk

Strain over ice in glass.

No experience means no chance?

STUDENT VOICE

EMILY FRASER
TALENTEGG.CA

As a hopeful future doctor, I know that an important element of the medical school application is relevant work experience.

Finding a job that would give me such experience has proven very difficult.

Last summer, I applied to numerous positions in hospitals and clinics, and went to many interviews.

Most of the interviewers told me, after I did not receive the job, that I was not chosen because I lacked previous experience.

I was frustrated because the application had not specified that previous experience in the field was mandatory.

I wasted a lot of effort applying and interviewing for these jobs, which did not want me, when I could have been focusing on jobs where I had a chance.

As a result, I did not find a medicine-related job and eventually I took a cashier job instead.

I began to wonder where the people who were actually hired for these jobs had gotten their previous work experience.

It's frustrating that in order to get jobs that give you a great experience opportunity, you have to already have a lot of work experience in the same field. I mean, you have to start somewhere.

I wish there was a place that listed jobs that offer great experience opportunities in various fields, where no real previous experience in the field is mandatory.

Or, at the very least, I wish the employers that do require previous work experience in their field would specify on the application so I would no longer waste their time and my own.

TALENTEGG.CA, CANADA'S ONLINE CAREER RESOURCE FOR STUDENTS AND RECENT GRADS, WANTS TO HEAR YOUR STUDENT VOICE. SHARE IT AT TALENTTEGG.CA.

What I learned

Key take-aways from Emily's experience:

- ▶ Students should look to volunteering as a means to gain experience. Your university likely has partnerships with student volunteer organizations, such as Best Buddies, which is a great place to start.

- ▶ Or, approach an organization, such as a hospital, and see if they accept volunteers. Even if you're only volunteering once a week, that's one day of experience that you didn't have before!

▶ Emily Fraser believes that employers should be as clear as possible about the previous experience applicants require to get a shot at an interview.

Where Emily is now

I just completed my second year of a Bachelor of Science degree in chemistry at Acadia University. I am happy to say that this year I was much more fortunate with my job hunt. After a great deal of hard work, I found a summer job as a research assistant in a lab.

I'm confident that this job will give me the experience I need in the field I am so interested in.

I also volunteer at a local nursing home and with Best Buddies Canada, an organization that pairs students in a one-on-one friendship with members of the community with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

These positions are hugely rewarding and they give me the experience I was looking for when applying to hospital jobs.

SEALING THE DEAL WHEN YOU SIGN

WORKPLACE LAW

DANIEL LUBLIN

DAN@CANADA
EMPLOYMENTLAWYER.COM
TWITTER: @DANLUBLIN

What happens if a group of just-dismissed, hourly wage employees, who barely speak English, sign a broad-ranging release preventing them from taking further legal action? Does it matter that their former employer paid them next to nothing to sign that release or that the employees feared they would get nothing at all if they refused to sign it? According to a recent human rights decision that amazes even me, the answer is that it does not matter at all!

Just-fired from their jobs as general labourers at Global Egg Corporation, a group of 10 Spanish-speaking former employees found themselves in a pickle. Presented with a severance agreement that they claimed not to understand, they were given one week to sign the documents, in exchange for an extra one or two weeks' pay, or they could refuse, in which case they thought they would not receive anything at all.

The group took the documents to the Centre for Spanish Speaking People and spoke with two lawyers from the Centre and an interpreter who explained the requirements of severance and gave them advice about the consequences of refusing to sign the agreement.

After the meeting everyone signed the documents, still fearful that they would not receive any money if they refused to sign. According to the one of the members of the group who testified at the recent hearing, she did not want to sign, but felt that she had no choice since she "needed the money." However, later on, believing the deal they received was discriminatory and unfair, the group complained to the Human Rights Tribunal, arguing that it should be set aside.

In a surprising human rights decision, the tribunal dismissed the claims at a preliminary hearing because of the agreements that were signed.

► Third-straight loss spells the end for national women's soccer team at World Cup ► Canada has advanced past group stage just once in five tries

A third loss and a power outage extended Canada's misery at the FIFA Women's World Cup.

Perpetua Nkwocha scored to give Nigeria a 1-0 victory over winless Canada yesterday in a game marked by a 13-minute power outage.

Nkwocha scored in the 84th minute, just a minute after play resumed, pouncing on a deflection to launch a shot past Canadian 'keeper Karina LeBlanc.

"I thought we showed a lot more fight this game, but we still didn't get the bounces, unfortunately," said Canadian midfielder Diana Matheson.

The loss to 27th-ranked Nigeria was the final blow for a sixth-ranked Canadian team that came to Germany with huge hopes, boasting a CONCACAF title and their highest-ever ranking.

But a tough opening 2-1 loss to Germany, followed by a 4-0 blowout against France quickly marked Canada's official demise.

"I think at this point we all just need to take ourselves away from soccer ... physically refocus and kind of start to love the game again," said Canadian midfielder Kaylyn Kyle.

Canada's captain Christine Sinclair had several chances, her first coming in the 32nd minute when she snuck through Nigeria's back line and beat 'keeper Precious Dede before running out of room.

"Obviously the results have been disappointing and not what we had hoped for and wanted and expected," said Sinclair. "But at the same time, as a women's football player and to look at this tournament, how well it's been put on, the fans, the awareness, it's been incredible to be a part of it."

"Obviously I would have liked to be part of it a little longer, but it's a starting point for us and we can just improve." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Woods will skip British Open

Those "minor" injuries to his left leg now have kept Tiger Woods from playing in two majors.

In an announcement on his website yesterday that came as no surprise, Woods said he would skip the British Open next week because his injuries have not fully healed.

"Unfortunately, I've been advised that I should not play in the British Open," Woods said. "As I stated at the AT&T National, I am only going to come back when I'm 100 per cent ready. I do not want to risk further injury. That's different for me, but I'm being smarter this time."

"I'm very disappointed and want to express my regrets to the British Open fans."

It will be the second time in the last four years that Woods has missed two majors in one season. He did not play the British Open and PGA Championship in 2008 while recovering from reconstructive surgery on his left knee. These injuries are not as easy to describe.

Woods said in May that he suffered "minor injuries" to knee ligaments and his Achilles while hitting from an awkward stance in the pine straw on the 17th hole in the third round at the Masters. Afterward, he skipped the Wells Fargo Championship and withdrew after nine holes from The Players Championship a week later. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Design

The brand new sheetmetal that has been sculpted for both Impreza sedan and wagon models does not extend to the Impreza-based (and rally-inspired) WRX/STI lineup, which were updated separately for the 2011 model year.

That being said, base Imprezas now feature the kind of bolder, broad-shouldered flared-fender styling that's similar to that of the WRX.

As well, the front and rear clip and sedan roofline are reminiscent of the larger Legacy.

A gas sipper that's AWD

MALCOLM GUNN
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA
WHEELBASE MEDIA

What? An all-wheel-drive vehicle that's easy on gas?

Quite right.

Subaru's least expensive model has been treated to a major makeover and will emerge this fall as a genuine fuel-sipping compact.

Through good economic times and bad, the Japan-based automaker's sales chart consistently points upward as more buyers become convinced that all-wheel-drive is the way to go. For Subaru, this method of propulsion is quite literally the only way to go since it's standard on every vehicle the company sells.

But there's no time for laurel-resting here.

Sure, the sales figures don't lie, but the fact is that while Subaru's Legacy sedan and its Outback and Forester wagons have been flying off the shelves, the Impreza's popularity has not been quite so dramatic.

The problems are two-fold: the car's underwhelming styling combined with a powerplant that burns through more gasoline than most compact car shoppers are prepared to accept.

All that is about to change once the 2012 Impreza hits the streets.

A new look, pump-passing fuel economy, plus the advantage of all-wheel-drive should give the Impreza a shot of newfound popularity.

Trim levels

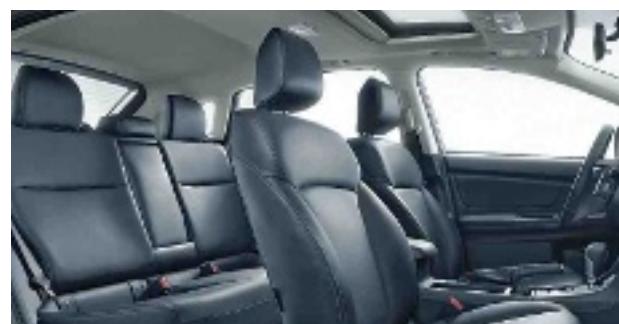

Subaru will likely introduce no fewer than four distinct trim levels and bulk up the base version with air conditioning, tilt/telescoping steering wheel, remote keyless entry plus the usual power-operated controls.

From there the sky's the limit, topping out with the Limited wagon model with leather seats, unique 17-inch alloy wheels and a premium audio package, to name just a few of the potential highlights.

Engine

The Impreza's engine displaces 2.0 litres and generates 148 horsepower. Compare that with the previous model's 170-horsepower 2.5-litre four-cylinder. Despite the engine's obvious drop in power, Subaru claims that the 2.0 will still provide lively performance due to reduced vehicle weight.

The biggest improvement, though, is the anticipated 30-per-cent improvement in overall fuel economy, estimated to be 8.7 l/100 km in the city and 6.5 on the highway. This is competitive with the class leaders, despite the fact that the Impreza is all-wheel-drive.

What you should know about the 2012 Subaru Impreza:

- Types: Four-door, all-wheel-drive compact sedan and wagon.
- Engine (hp): 2.0-litre DOHC H4 (148).
- Transmission: Five-speed manual; continuously variable (opt.).
- Market position: Subaru resolutely stands alone in equipping its entire North American vehicle lineup with all-wheel-drive. It's a position that has helped the automaker maintain steady sales growth.
- Mileage: L/100 km (city/hwy) 8.7/6.5 (est., CVT).

Test your fuel knowledge

► Take this quiz to discover some useful tips to prolong the life of your engine and save you a few dollars at the pump

True or false?

1. All gasolines are the same.

2. Regular engine maintenance can help save you money on fuel.

3. Octane levels in fuel don't make a difference.

4. Tire pressure can affect the fuel-efficiency of your vehicle.

5. The faster you drive, the faster you burn fuel.

Answers:

1. False. "Gasoline choice plays a vital role in the cleanliness and performance of an engine," confirms Ken Mitchell, an engineer from Shell Canada.

"If you've been using a lower-quality gasoline, there may be build-up of 'engine gunk,' which can negatively affect engine performance.

Protecting your engine from gunk is as simple as using a high-quality gasoline, like all three grades of Shell Nitrogen Enriched Gasoline."

2. True. Regular servicing and following the service recommendations for your vehicle, such as changing the air filter, spark plugs, engine oil and other fluids ensure optimum performance and fuel efficiency.

A poorly maintained vehicle can boost fuel consumption by up to 15 per cent and increases emissions by even more.

3. False. When a lower octane fuel is used in an engine designed for higher octane, engine knocking may occur, causing the car

40%

Did you know that a well-maintained vehicle can improve fuel efficiency by up to 40 per cent?

to shudder and lose performance. Using the right octane for your engine ensures maximum fuel economy and fewer emissions.

4. True. Operating a vehicle with just one tire underinflated by 8 psi (56 kPa) can increase vehicle fuel consumption by 4 per cent.

5. True. The faster you drive, the more wind resistance you'll encounter and the more fuel your vehicle will consume to maintain speed. Reducing your speed to 90 km/h from 110 km/h saves up to 20 per cent of your fuel. NEWS CANADA

It's not just the fancy new luxury cars that have strings of LEDs around the headlight housings. Thanks to Putco, you can buy LED Dayliners, which are application-specific and not generic. Pictured here is the new LED Dayliner for the 2009 and up Ford F-150. Here, a bright string of LED lights is embedded into a chromed-aluminum frame that sticks to the stock light housing with 3M-tape backing. Included is five feet of wiring to allow hookup to your low-beam headlights or daytime running lights. Applications also include the Chrysler 300, GMC Sierra, Dodge Ram, Chevrolet Camaro and Silverado. putco.com.

INDYCARS POWERED BY MASHED SUGARCANE

AUTO PILOT

DRIVE
@METRONEWS.CA

An IndyCar engine is a ferocious thing. It burns fuel at a voracious rate (about three mpg), belts out over 650 horsepower, and howls alarmingly, like a pack of coyotes high on Red Bull.

So it always seems a bit strange to contemplate that the fuel used to create this explosive fury is actually a very close cousin to apple cider.

In 2007, the IndyCar Series became the first major motorsports series to use ethanol as its fuel of choice.

As you can imagine, the racing fraternity is under pressure from society to go green ... or at least "greener."

Automobile racing is never going to be a totally benign environmental activity, especially a major international race, where lots of people get on planes, trains and automobiles to get to said race. But these are strange times. Times when a household might have two huge, honking SUVs in the garage, but also a composter in the backyard, and a solar panel on the roof.

Racing needs to be doing something green, and IndyCar's ethanol strategy, which aims to raise ethanol's profile, and the collective IQ about all things ethanol, is certainly a good and worthy initiative.

"We want to demon-

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

strate that you can run a high performance, high-speed racecar, under a fully-renewable alternative fuel source," was the message from IndyCar's senior technical director, Les MacTaggart, at last month's race in Iowa.

Initially the IndyCar Series used ethanol sourced from U.S. corn, and still does for the aptly named Iowa Corn Indy 250. But since the 2009 season the Series sources its ethanol for all other races from a Brazilian consortium, which makes the stuff from sugarcane.

In addition to its renewability, ethanol also burns somewhat cleaner than regular gasoline.

You've probably heard of E10 ethanol, which all regular cars can use (10 per cent ethanol and 90 per cent gasoline), and E85 ethanol, which flex-fuel vehicles can use (85 per cent ethanol, 15 per cent gasoline).

But the IndyCars use almost pure ethanol, called E98. The other two per cent is gasoline, and the only reason it's in there, is so some of you don't use the stuff to make ethanol martinis.

What a concept though — drinkable alcohol available at your local gas station, via a high-speed nozzle?

I'm not saying we should we do it, just that it would be an amazingly efficient way of getting alcohol to the masses.

NASCAR has followed IndyCar's ethanol lead, although with less gusto. This year is NASCAR's first for ethanol, and only with an E15 blend. Apparently, the good old boys of NASCAR needed more convincing that their racecars and the racing in general wouldn't be hampered in any way by ethanol's participation.

And so far it hasn't... NASCAR, like IndyCar, has remained joyfully loud, fast, and rambunctious.

Improving society improves road safety

Living in a tight-knit community has several advantages, but here's one you may not have considered: you're less likely to be killed in a car crash.

It's a benefit of "social capital," according to Matthew Nagler, associate professor of economics at the City College of New York, who says that public policies that strengthen communities could reduce traffic deaths.

"Social capital describes

DRIVING FORCE

JIL MCINTOSH

the strength of connections that people have with each other in a community," Dr. Nagler says.

"It's connected with a number of important outcomes, such as health, lower rates of teen pregnancies, drugs and alcohol, and economic prosperity. It's like (monetary) capital but with people invested in the community."

The idea started in 2000 with an article in a French newspaper.

"The piece said that we in France are just disastrous, people have no tolerance, we cut each other off, we're rude to each other and we have a lot of fatalities, but people are more courteous in Scandinavia and have a lower rate of fatalities," Dr. Nagler says.

While the article was simply an opinion piece, it caught the eye of John Helliwell, a professor at the University of British Columbia, who did a short study and found fewer traffic fatalities in countries where survey respondents said other people could be trusted.

Dr. Nagler took this study to the next step.

He used over 10 years of data from 48 U.S. states, accounting for variables such as alcohol consumption and driver age.

He found that, in states and in years with higher levels of social capital, there are lower rates of traffic incidents.

"It largely has to do with courtesy and the way people behave when they feel they can trust other people on the road," Dr. Nagler says.

"If drivers feel that they relate more to other people, they'll yield at intersections, they'll wave, they'll be more polite, and that translates into greater safety.

If you don't trust other drivers, you're more likely to cut them off, speed up and try to get to an intersection first, and you'll see higher rates of accidents.

"I'm able to conclusively argue that it's not just a correlation, but it really is the degree of social capital that is responsible for the safety outcomes."

SECOND GEAR

 JUSTIN PRITCHARD
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

The XC90 was Volvo's shot at machines like the Mercedes ML, Audi Q7 and Acura MDX. A premium four-wheel drive SUV, it boasted uniquely rugged styling, available V8 power, and a long-lived reputation for safety and occupant protection.

At launch in 2003, two turbocharged engines were available — namely a 2.5-litre turbo five-cylinder engine with 208 horsepower, or a 2.9-litre turbocharged straight six with 268. Look for a five-speed automatic and AWD with both engines.

A 3.2-litre straight-six with 235 horsepower was also available in later years, fitted with a six-speed automatic, and a 4.4-litre, 311-horsepower V8 engine was added to the lineup later in the XC90's life.

Look for the XC90 in five or seven-seat configurations, and with features like heated leather, premium audio, a sunroof, self-dimming rearview mirror, keyless engine start, heated mirrors, bi-xenon lights and plenty more.

► 2009 Volvo XC90 V8 R-Design

What Owners Like

XC90 owners typically rave about sport-sedan road manners, smooth and refined performance, and a safe and stable road feel with plenty of traction in virtually any condition.

Performance with the V8 engine is also highly rated.

Common Issues

Start your XC90 test drive with an inspection of the interior, ensuring all electronics work as expected, and that no trim pieces are missing or broken. Check for proper operation from the stereo and climate control system.

A full check-over by a Volvo-trained mechanic is also advised. Have said mechanic check for excessive tire and brake wear, the condition of the suspension system, and for any fluid leaks from the engine, transmission, transfer case or differentials.

Note that well-documented transmission failure issues with the T6-powered models should be considered when shopping for a used XC90. Where possible, avoid a used XC90 with the T6 engine.

Higher-mileage turbocharged XC90s should be checked for turbocharger condition by a mechanic or mechanically-inclined friend. A turbocharger replacement will run into the thousands of dollars, so avoid any XC90 that smokes at startup or under hard acceleration, and be sure to check inside the "charge pipe" coming out of the turbocharger for pooling oil. Where maintenance is concerned, the XC90's naturally-aspirated 3.2-litre engine will likely be the cheapest to run.

The Verdict

Comfort, styling, capability and safety will be the most compelling reasons to check out an XC90 as a used buy. Major issues are well documented, and shoppers avoiding the T6-powered model can likely expect a relatively affordable used premium SUV ownership experience.

♈ Aries March 21-April 20

Others must be made to understand that you won't always be there to catch them when they fall.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 If you say bad things about someone today, you will regret it tomorrow.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 If you discover something about a friend that could be embarrassing, make sure you keep it to yourself.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Think before you act today — then think again to make sure you are not fooling yourself.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23

Today, more than most days, you will have to lead from the front. As always, you will do it so well.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 It may be easy to find fault with people.

But today, give partners and colleagues the benefit of the doubt.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 You may think you have to be decisive, but even a Libra is entitled to a day off.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22

What you think of as serious today won't seem remotely important tomorrow, so don't get worked up.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21

Make sure you got your finger on the pulse and move with the times.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20

You may be feeling down but that's perfectly natural. The next 24 hours will bring some cheerful news.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18

Let partners and loved ones know how much they mean. You're good with words and that'll be enough.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You don't give up easily so don't let someone talk you out of project too soon.
